SERIOUS COLLEGE LIFE

THE young man or co-ed emerging from college life is not going to be the hapless creature depicted by cartoonists and humorists if the reactionary mood of several of the leading universities is left unheeded. The youth returning to the home of his parents has not always carried with his diploma a record for studious application and high achievements in the arts and sciences. Expensive tastes, a profound contempt for commoners and a deplorable ignorance of all but the most frivolous and superficial subjects are the usual corollary of the graduate who wonders why the world does not accord him a living at his own appraisal. The golden hours of adolescence may have been frivole away, but this is not to continue. Sharp criticism has struck at the root of the evil of education. Parents of a practical turn do not approve of the product thrust by universities on the home. The graduate is so superior to his domestic environment that on his return from college he rarely can be assimilated in the family circle. Knowledge of the growing gulf between the home and the college has been forced strongly on several of the families which have decided that their schools must either degenerate into training schools for fashionable faddists or revise their several curricula to develop studious habits. One of the leading universities on the coast, with probably the heaviest endowment of any institution of the character in the west, has taken radical action by declaring against the foibles and follies of the day. 'Study must be the chief aim of this university, even thought athletic and social life suffer. Rowing, baseball, football, tennis, motoring, polo and all the other time slaying and money devouring devices for the dilettante must go, if necessary. A circular to this effect has been sent to the parents of every student enrolled with the injunction that the boy or girl better remain at home unless they go back with the intention of pursuing their studies without the distractions and temptations of extraneous occupations. To carry the idea further the college has drawn the line on the amount of pocket money permitted students since it has been found that the inordinately rich stand in the way of humble students who are seduced from study by the allurements of outdoor life. The motto that "This is the Life" is not going to be tolerated. The hard working student is the one whose talents command the interest of faculties and the American college is going back to the early day experiences for the purpose of culling out the riotous and superficial student.

The same thought that prompts this action is stimulating development of youths of both sexes by striving to provide work for the self supporting student in order to reduce the cost of education.

HUGHES' EFFECTIVENESS

ONE of the thousands who heard it has failed to use extreme expressions in describing the effectiveness of Mr. Hughes' speech of acceptance upon an audience whose environment of temperature would have furnished an excuse for apathy. Even the Democratic newspapers of the metropolis have been moved, by the truthfulness of the reportorial spirit, to speak of the sincere enthusiasm which the candidate's words and manner provoked.

In addition, the speech has made its appeal to numberless thousands who have since read it in the quiet of their homes and offices. These are the tests of public utterance. Speeches which touch both the ear and the mind are the speeches which make for effectiveness—and Mr. Hughes has shown, in his first and in his successive utterances of the campaign, that his years on the bench have only served to strengthen his powers of clear and effective statement, his ability to arrest attention and his capacity to carry conviction.

In this last particular Mr. Hughes possesses a marked advantage—we trust the comparison is not too invidious—over his opponent. Mr. Wilson is able to charm the ear often; sometimes he arrests attention; but it is most infrequent that he carries conviction. The artist who strives for effect or who loses himself in the intricacies of technique rarely produces a canvas that endures; but he who pours out his soul upon his palette paints pictures that live on and that move generations to whom the painter is but a name. To be effective is to be sincere. And Hughes' effectiveness is the fruit of his sincerity.

Colorado should be a good state. It has often been cited that the Centennial state would be the gainer by holding half a dozen mossback burials, but the critics did not intend the suggestion should apply in the material sense disclosed by a report that shows the state received exactly $1,007,631 from the inheritance tax paid by half a dozen millionaire estates within a few months.

LOCAL EXPERT GIVES ADVICE

The manager of the Willard storage battery service station in Tonopah says that batteries are often blamed unjustly.

"In a very interesting booklet recently issued by the Willard company, the fact is brought out that a storage battery goes dead either because it has not been regularly filled with distilled water or the owner has neglected to keep it fully charged either by running the car or having it charged from an outside source.

"Once in awhile a starved condition of a battery may be due to poor generator adjustment or to a material increase in the lamp load. If the generator is unable to supply current to the battery as fast as it is taken out, or if the owner does not run his car enough in the daytime to give the generator a chance to restore the current used by night driving, his battery is bound to show the effect. This can be remedied, however, by a long charge at a low rate after testing the cells with a hydrometer to determine their specific gravity. "Any Willard service station will make this test free of charge."

SMASHED A WINDOW

An unknown person threw a rock through the window of the Balkan bar, on Florence avenue, last night. The damage is estimated by the owner, Charles Richards, at $50.

FRENCH SCIENTISTS TO ENGAGE IN REORGANIZING INDUSTRIES OF NATION

(By Associated Press.)

PARIS, August 8.—Although French scientists have done a good deal to help the government catch up with Germany in the scientific departments of her military preparation, there is still complaint that their services have not been utilized to the best advantage, and the Academy of Sciences now poses a question as to whether men of technical training shall not have a greater share in the formidable work of reorganizing France after the war.

Henry le Chatelier, of the Institute, proposes that the academy go to work at once to formulate the working methods best calculated to accelerate the industrial and economic recovery of the country, without waiting for politicians to decide whether the services of technical and scientific men will be accepted.

Members of the institute expected that the government would have recourse to their technical knowledge in the organization of some of the army departments. Instead, members of Parliament, entirely lacking in technical knowledge, were placed in charge of services such as munitions, sanitary and aeronautic departments, while men of technical training were allowed only to submit inventions and suggestions.

Under the Parliamentary regime the presence of men not members of Parliament in the government is not looked upon with favor. Premier Briand was obliged to overcome considerable resistance in order to the Chamber of Deputies to accept such specialists as Gen. Gallieni in the War department and Admiral Lacaze at the head of the navy.

"The administration has no use for savants," is a remark attributed to the bureaucrats of the War and Navy departments. Both those portfolios have been held by civilians at most critical periods of the history of the third republic.

The Navy department has been administered by a naval officer only three years out of the last twenty. The rest of the time it was in the hands of lawyers or journalists.

Just prior to the Tangiers incident that threatened war, the navy was administered by a journalist and the War department by a stockbroker.

PROMOTING LAND AND FARM WORK

(By Associated Press.)

LONDON, August 8.—One of the effects of the war will be seen in a great revival of agricultural life in England and the United Kingdom. The outbreak of the conflict caught the British Isles dependent on foreign commerce for four-fifths of their food supply, barring meat, of which 60 and 70 per cent is produced at home.

The motto of a few years ago, "Back to the Land," thus has given way to the slogan, "England must feed herself." Lord Selborne, the leader of the crusade, declares that the attainment of this object is the country's sacred duty, and he emphasizes the point that the farmer can do as much for the country as the soldier in the trenches.

Plans for the great reform include a number of important measures that are to be put into effect at the earliest possible moment. They include the following:

The repopulation of the rural districts and afforestation. The War office has just consented to the exchange of many of the older men who in the earlier days of the war left farm work for the firing line for men between 19 and 30 to take their places at the front. This exchange will begin immediately.

The setting aside of thousands of acres for the settlement on the co-operative plan of England's soldiers and sailors after the war. This expediency is provided for by the smallholding colonies act, now half way through Parliament. The plan will provide for model villages, better housing, with a garden to every cottage, reading rooms, libraries and good schools. Conceived by Lord Selborne, the idea has aroused so much enthusiasm that a wide demand has been made for increasing the land to be devoted to it by almost as much again as is specified in the bill.

The importation of natives from South Africa for agricultural labor during the remainder of the war, though so many objections have been raised that there is little likelihood of its being adopted.

It is believed that the plan for bringing back soldiers from the front will have the effect of providing sufficient farm labor practically immediately. In announcing the War office's consent to the transfers, an expert told the Agricultural society that in England and Scotland, as well as in Ireland, the farms in many districts have fallen far below their minimum needs in the matter of labor.

There is not even sub-rosa information about the course of the German submarine.—Chicago Post.

French women have asked to join the army. Pretty soon there won't be any "girl I left behind me."—Atlanta Constitution.

The Fallacy of Paraffine base: Eastern oil manufacturers have long extolled the superior virtues of paraffine base motor oils. But Pacific Coast motorists have proved that Zerolene, made from selected California crude, asphalt-base, gave best results. Their experience is now supported by the testimony of international experts. Lieut. Bryan stated before the Am. Soc. of Naval Engineers: "Oils made from the asphalt-base crudes have shown themselves better adapted to motor cylinders, as far as their carbon-forming proclivities are concerned, than are paraffine-base Pennsylvania oils." Zerolene received highest competitive awards, San Francisco and San Diego Expositions. Dealers everywhere and at service stations and agencies of the Standard Oil Company.
